

What about an instrument?

It is always important to begin learning on a good quality musical instrument. These can be quite expensive, so in the initial stages maybe renting an instrument from a local music shop would be the best way forward.

However, in the long term having your own instrument is always the best, and ELSEinstrumental will be happy to help in acquiring an instrument. Their many contacts being able to offer substantial discounts.

Brass Lessons @ St Aidan's

High quality music tuition by

ELSEINSTRUMENTAL

About the teacher

Duncan Else has been teaching brass at St Aidan's for over 35 years. He has a close affinity with the school - with both children having attended and playing an active role in the musical life of the school.

He has a wealth of experience as a brass performer and teacher, playing in many bands and orchestras over the years. Also an accomplished conductor, Duncan has conducted ensembles in such prestigious venues as the Symphony Hall, Birmingham and the Royal Festival Hall, London.

As a fully qualified teacher, Duncan has a current DBS Enhanced certificate and Public Liability insurance.

About the lessons

Children receive tuition in small groups or individually. Most lessons will be on a rolling timetable, with some fixed lesson times for GCSE/A level students.

Many students continue from starting tuition at primary school, but a high level of progress can be made by those commencing lessons whilst at St Aidans.

ABRSM instrumental graded exams can be taken at the appropriate levels of ability.

As pupils progress they will be encouraged to join the school's music ensembles in order to fully enjoy the experience of music making.

If you have any queries about lessons please contact ELSEinstrumental or the St Aidan's Music Department .
